Fitch Affirms German Development Banks' Joint Agency Social Bond at 'AAA'

Tue 17 Sep, 2024 - 12:01 PM ET

Fitch Ratings - Frankfurt am Main - 17 Sep 2024: Fitch Ratings has affirmed Joint Agency Social Bond's EUR500 million bonds' (DE000A30VPZ3) long-term rating at 'AAA'. The bonds were issued by a group of three German regional development banks in September 2022.

The three development banks are Hamburgische Investitions- und Foerderbank, Investitions- und Strukturbank Rheinland-Pfalz and Investitionsbank des Landes Brandenburg.

KEY RATING DRIVERS

The bonds' 'AAA' rating is equalised with the rating of each of the three development banks' senior unsecured debt issuance because direct, explicit, unlimited and unconditional guarantees from the federal states to the development banks cover the development banks' liabilities, including their respective shares in this Joint Agency Social Bond.

The 'AAA' senior unsecured debt ratings of the development banks are equalised with their respective Issuer Default Ratings (IDRs). These IDRs are aligned with those of their respective owners and guarantors, the German Federal State of Hamburg and Rhineland Palatinate, and with the creditworthiness of the Federal State of Brandenburg, based on their strong ability and propensity to support the banks.

The creditworthiness of the owners is underpinned by the strength of the German solidarity system, which links the states' creditworthiness to that of the Federal Republic of Germany (AAA/Stable).

Based on the direct, explicit, unlimited and unconditional guarantee from the federal states to their development banks, creditors can present claims against the banks directly to the relevant federal state based on these guarantees.

Each development bank is liable for its individual share in the issue, the proceeds of which are divided between the participating banks as follows:

Hamburgische Investitions- und Foerderbank: EUR175 million

Investitions- und Strukturbank Rheinland-Pfalz: EUR175 million

Investitionsbank des Landes Brandenburg: EUR150 million

RATING SENSITIVITIES

Factors that Could, Individually or Collectively, Lead to Negative Rating Action/Downgrade

Negative rating action on the bond would be triggered by a change in the federal states' ratings or creditworthiness leading to a downgrade of the participating banks' ratings. Collectively, this would most likely be driven by a downgrade of Germany, indicating a weakening ability of the federal states to provide support to their respective development banks.

An adverse change or a divergence in development banks' support schemes - likely to be triggered by changes to the respective development banks' laws - making their credit risk profiles less correlated, would result in a review of the bond's rating.

Factors that Could, Individually or Collectively, Lead to Positive Rating Action/Upgrade

The bond's rating is at the highest level on Fitch's rating scale and cannot be upgraded.

Criteria Variation

Fitch has determined that a criteria variation is applicable, because its Bank Rating Criteria do not explicitly capture bonds issued by multiple issuers, which is a characteristic of these bonds. However, Fitch believes that the transaction's specific risk to investors, of being a separate liability of each issuer according to its share in the transaction, is adequately mitigated by the credit risks of these banks being highly correlated and supported by their identical ratings, given the uniform statutory support framework from their owners.

PUBLIC RATINGS WITH CREDIT LINKAGE TO OTHER RATINGS

The bond's rating is linked to the ratings of the participating development banks, which are linked to those of Federal State of Hamburg and Rhineland Palatinate and the creditworthiness of Brandenburg.

In issuing and maintaining its ratings and in making other reports (including forecast information), Fitch relies on factual information it receives from issuers and underwriters and from other sources Fitch believes to be credible. Fitch conducts a reasonable investigation of the factual information relied upon by it in accordance with its ratings methodology, and obtains reasonable verification of that information from independent sources, to the extent such sources are available for a given security or in a given jurisdiction. The manner of Fitch's factual investigation and the scope of the third-party verification it obtains will vary depending on the nature of the rated security and its issuer, the requirements and practices in the jurisdiction in which the rated security is offered and sold and/or the issuer is located, the availability and nature of relevant public information, access to the management of the issuer and its advisers, the availability of pre-existing third-party verifications such as audit reports, agreed-upon procedures letters, appraisals, actuarial reports, engineering reports, legal opinions and other reports provided by third parties, the availability of independent and competent third-party verification sources with respect to the particular security or in the particular jurisdiction of the issuer, and a variety of other factors. Users of Fitch's ratings and reports should understand that neither an enhanced factual investigation nor any third-party verification can ensure that all of the information Fitch relies on in connection with a rating or a report will be accurate and complete. Ultimately, the issuer and its advisers are responsible for the accuracy of the information they provide to Fitch and to the market in offering documents and other reports. In issuing its ratings and its reports, Fitch must rely on the work of experts, including independent auditors with respect to financial statements and attorneys with respect to legal and tax matters. Further, ratings and forecasts of financial and other information are inherently forward-looking and embody assumptions and predictions about future events that by their nature cannot be verified as facts. As a result, despite any verification of current facts, ratings and forecasts can be affected by future events or conditions that were not anticipated at the time a rating or forecast was issued or affirmed. Fitch Ratings makes routine, commonly-accepted adjustments to reported financial data in accordance with the relevant criteria and/or industry standards to provide financial metric consistency for entities in the same sector or asset class.

The complete span of best- and worst-case scenario credit ratings for all rating categories ranges from 'AAA' to 'D'. Fitch also provides information on best-case rating upgrade scenarios and worst-case rating downgrade scenarios (defined as the 99th percentile of rating transitions, measured in each direction) for international credit ratings, based on historical performance. A simple average across asset classes presents best-case upgrades of 4 notches and worst-case downgrades of 8 notches at the 99th percentile. A Fitch rating is an opinion as to the creditworthiness of a security. This opinion and reports made by Fitch are based on established criteria and methodologies that Fitch is continuously evaluating and updating. Therefore, ratings and reports are the collective work product of Fitch and no individual, or group of individuals, is solely responsible for a rating or a report. The rating does not address the risk of loss due to risks other than credit risk, unless such risk is specifically mentioned. Fitch is not

Ratings do not comment on the adequacy of market price, the suitability of any security for a particular investor, or the tax-exempt nature or taxability of payments made in respect to any security. Fitch receives fees from issuers, insurers, guarantors, other obligors, and underwriters for rating securities. Such fees generally vary from US$1,000 to US$750,000 (or the applicable currency equivalent) per issue. In certain cases, Fitch will rate all or a number of issues issued by a particular issuer, or insured or guaranteed by a particular insurer or guarantor, for a single annual fee. Such fees are expected to vary from US$10,000 to US$1,500,000 (or the applicable currency equivalent).
